

Making Peace

Peace and Paradox

David Chernikoff

Formation of the Heart: Part 2

Ken and Ellie Peters

Making Peace with Your Money

Adele Azar-Rucquoi

Women and Peace-Building

Louise Franklin Sheehy

Book Reviews

My Grandfather's Blessings

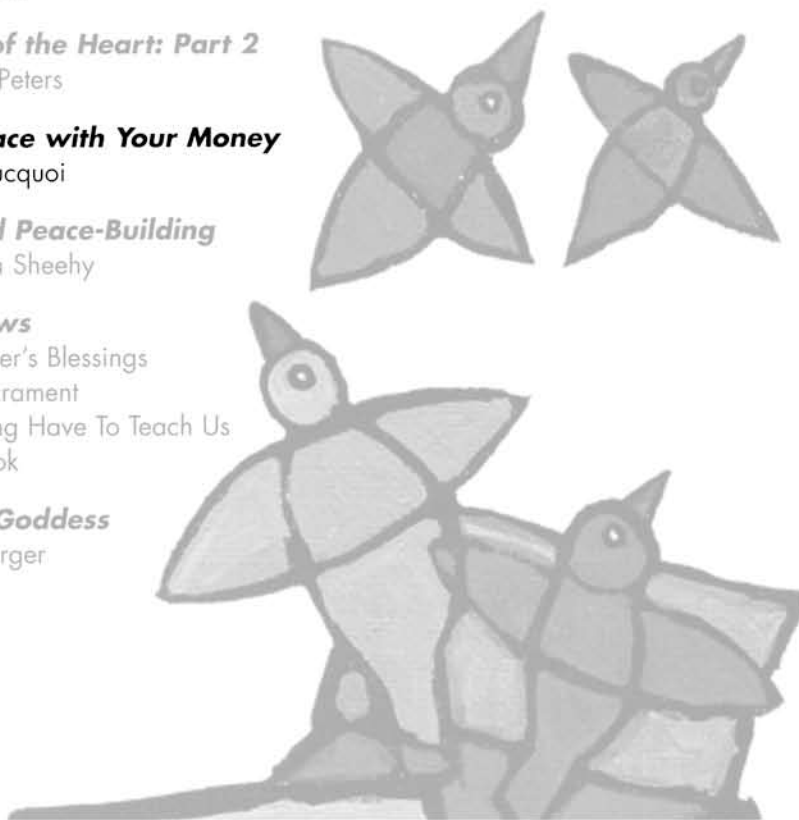

Money as Sacrament

What the Dying Have To Teach Us

The Peace Book

The Desert Goddess

Karen Nurnberger

Money As Sacrament: finding the sacred in money

By Adele Azar-Rucquoi

Mirror of our soul's intention? Physical symbol of the sacred? Powerful energy? Both body and spirit? Money?

Even with New Age gurus touting rules and mantras for creating abundance, it's still easy on a personal level to gloss over your relationship with hard cash. In Money As Sacrament, author Adele Azar reveals her journey from immigrant Syrian roots to the family store, from monastic life in a convent to a substantial inheritance, from her marriage to a brilliant homeless man to her current reflective inner work.

Now in her 60's, Azar's journey is still punctuated with money-consciousness. She writes this guide especially for women who wish to finally confront their fear and anxiety around value and worth and having enough.

Readers will appreciate and identify with over 30 collected stories of women as well as lessons from Adele's personal family legacy and mentors. The thought-provoking nature of Money As Sacrament will provide an opening for women of all social strata to address issues of self-esteem, parental bias and life purpose. I highly recommend this book, especially the engaging epilogue ("Further Conversations") which could be used as a place to begin peeling the onion of money-angst.

©2002, Celestial Arts, ISBN: 1-58761-137-6, 219 pages.

